

CABINET DECISIONS – 29 JANUARY 2021

1. Cabinet has taken note of the judgment delivered by the Special Chamber of the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea on 28 January 2021 in the case brought by Mauritius against Maldives under the UN Convention on the Law of the Sea.

The Special Chamber overruled all the preliminary objections raised by Maldives and held that it has jurisdiction to delimit the maritime boundary between Mauritius and Maldives in the region of the Chagos Archipelago.

The Special Chamber also confirmed that Mauritius has undisputed sovereignty over the Chagos Archipelago and that the United Kingdom's claim to sovereignty over the Chagos Archipelago is contrary to the determinations made by the International Court of Justice in its Advisory Opinion of 25 February 2019 that the detachment of the Chagos Archipelago from Mauritius was unlawful and that the United Kingdom's continued administration of the Chagos Archipelago constitutes an unlawful act of a continuing character.
